Background-Utah Effectiveness Project

The Utah Board of Education’s mission includes providing high quality instruction for all students as one of the key pillars of the essential promised work of public education.

Education research is very clear that effective instruction matters and teachers are the single most school-level influence on student achievement. Therefore, the foundational assumptions of the Utah Educator Effectiveness Project recognize that high quality instruction in all public schools in Utah requires:

1. Measuring teaching and leadership with research-based performance standards.
2. Aligning preparation programs to Utah Effective Teaching Standards and Utah Educational Leadership Standards.
3. Evaluating the effectiveness of educators yearly using multiple measures.
4. Recruiting, retaining, promoting, and rewarding the most effective educators.
5. Providing appropriate professional development at all stages of the professional career continuum.

The five major components of the Educator Effectiveness Project are directly targeted at improving instruction and are all essential for improving educational outcomes for all students. The Utah State Board of Education adopted the Utah Effective Teaching Standards and Utah Educational Leadership Standards (R277-530), August 2011 as the first and most crucial step of the overall project.

These standards will serve as the basis for district educator evaluation systems as well as the model system being developed by the Utah Educator Evaluation Advisory Committee and subsequent workgroups. The Utah State Board of Education then adopted R277-531 September 2011, outlining the educator evaluation components and processes required of all school districts in Utah.

This Educator Effectiveness system and subsequent policy and manual, is the Cache County School District’s model of complying with these state-required provisions.

Teaching begins with the learning. To ensure that each student learns, new knowledge and skills, teachers must understand that learning and developmental patterns vary among individuals, that learners bring unique individual differences to the learning process, and that learners need supportive and safe learning environments to thrive.

Standard Two-Learning Differences

Principal “Look For”

Effective
- Uses formative assessments throughout lesson to assess student learning and adjust instruction
- In tune with all student needs

- High expectations posed or consistently communicated in some way
- Differentiated Instruction
- Strategically groups learning Teams

Highly Effective

- Sharing in PLC’s tracking student progress and achievement goals
- Takes ownership of all students in the school/grade, not only their own students
- Encourages learners to collaborate and learn from each other
- Examples celebrating success
- Peer review/work
- Adapt lessons plan “on the fly” enough experience they can seamless move from something that isn’t working to something more effective
- Students become experts/teachers with their own learning

Lesson Plan Evidence

- Identify points in the lesson where formative assessment strategies are used
- Multiple assessments-formative and ongoing
- Set up to make sure collaboration is happening in class
- Collaboration among teachers PLCs
- Plans for multiple ways of demonstrating understanding
- Uses student responses/plan ways to check for understanding during instruction
- Plan for varied homework/independent practice

Teacher Evidence

- Plan for PLCs/records of collaboration
- Lesson plan incorporating group work and activities that take concerted effort to have students effectively work together
- Schedule for walk to read
- Pre-teaching of lesson
- Enrichment for high end students
- Rubrics/examples of outstanding group work

Measurement of Stakeholder Input is located in Standard 1: Learner Development in the Utah Effective Teaching Standards. The essential disposition of an effective educator values the input and contributions of families, colleagues, and other professionals in understanding and supporting each learner’s development.

Stakeholder Input, as evidence, can take many different forms. For example, they may include USBE developed climate surveys, individual student surveys, end-of-course surveys, parent surveys, accreditation surveys, climate surveys, two-way communication through newsletters or other resources, etc.

For all secondary school educators, an anonymous end-of-course survey will be made available through Canvas Commons (called CCSD End of Course Survey) and can be imported into any Canvas course. Educators can use the results of this survey to understand what students/parents perceive as effective, and areas for potential improvement.

Examples of Stakeholder Input Surveys are located in the Appendix. These may be used or modified with direction from the school administrator/supervisor.

Educators should conference with their building principals on:
- How Stakeholder Input information will be gathered
- How this information will be reported back to the principal
Measurement of Student Growth is located in Standard 5: Assessment in the Utah Effective Teaching Standards. The essential disposition of an effective educator is committed to using multiple types of assessment processes to support, verify, and document learning and to the ethical use of various assessment and assessment data to identify learner strengths and needs to promote learner growth.

Research has demonstrated that using data in instructional practices lead to improved student performance. Using multiple data sources help educators make better-informed decisions on how well their students are growing academically.

Evidence of student growth can take many different forms. Educators should use many, varied assessments, including common formative assessments to gauge the progress of their students. Pre and post examinations, as well as looking at previous year’s assessments are ways that educators can demonstrate student growth.

Educators should conference with their building principals on:

- Which assessments will be used
- How information will be gathered to show growth
- How this information will be reported back to the principal

Plan of Assistance for Career Educators

The Plan of Assistance for Career Educators is designed to assist Career Educators who, in the judgment of Cache County School District need a more structured mode of supervision to reach effectiveness as an instructor. Ideally, this option is characterized by recognition on the part of the staff member and the administrator that the individual needs more assistance in order to be successful in the classroom. Movement into this evaluation plan reflects a need for a staff member to improve in one or more of the professional domain areas. Contact Kirk McRae in Human Resources when creating a plan of assistance for Career Educators.

1. Awareness will be initiated through discussion of an area in need of improvement between the evaluator and teacher.

2. When a majority of component ratings within a domain are Not Effective or Minimally Effective within scheduled or unscheduled observation and/or summative evaluation of any tenured staff member, a plan of assistance will be implemented. The evaluator will immediately notify the staff member of specific concerns.

3. The evaluator and staff member will collaboratively develop strategies to enable the individual to address concerns and regain competencies.

4. Collaboratively, the evaluator and staff member will develop an action plan to remedy the problem/situation. The action plan shall include a timeline for review of no more than 30 days.

5. The assistance plan will focus on specific professional domain area(s) and will include strategies for resolution of the problem area(s), indicators of success, and administrative assistance to enable the staff member to overcome the difficulty/problem. The plan will be in writing.

6. If appropriate, the plan may take on the form of an increased observation cycle.

7. The assistance plan shall include:
a. Identification of the improvement needs

b. Strategies for improvement

c. Indicators of success shall be identified

d. Administrative feedback schedule

8. If, at the end of the agreed upon timeline, the majority of the professional domain area(s) is Effective, the staff member will return to the appropriate Career-Educator status.

9. If, at the end of the timeline, the professional domain area(s) continues to be Not Effective or Minimally Effective, a revised plan or a continuation of the plan shall be discussed.
