

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS ABOUT SCHOOL DISTRICT RESPONSIBILITIES AND HOME SCHOOLS

1. What may a school district require of a parent who wishes to exempt a school age student from school attendance?

Parents/Guardians shall submit a signed and notarized affidavit, to the school age child's school district of residence, stating that the child will attend home school and acknowledging the sole responsibility for the education of the school age minor(s). The affidavit is available at the school district of residence offices.

2. What are the requirements for days and hours of instruction of a home-schooled student?

A local school board may not require a parent of the home schooled minor to maintain records of instruction or attendance.

3. May the school district impose additional requirements on parents who wish to exempt a school age child from school attendance?

A school district may request additional reasonable information from a parent for purposes of exemption for home schooling. The requested information should be adequate to verify the identity of the student and may include such information as parent(s)' names, phone numbers, street address, children's date of birth, other reasonable information that allows the school/school district to confirm the student's identity and eligibility for public school attendance.

4. When a parent has submitted the signed affidavit as provided for in the statute, is a school district required to provide a certificate excusing a school age child from public school attendance?

School Boards excusing minors from attendance as provided by the statute, shall issue a certificate stating that the minor student is excused from attendance during the current school year and on an annual basis thereafter. Once the affidavit has been submitted, with all required information, the attendance exemption certificate must be provided to parent(s) within 30 days.

5. What is the responsibility of the school district for curriculum, assessment, selection of materials, evaluation of home school instruction, or designating the time and place of instruction?

The district has no authority or responsibility relative to any of the above. The curriculum, assessment, selection of home school instruction, and the time and place of instruction are all the sole responsibility of the parent/guardian.

1 "Affidavit" means "a written/printed declaration or statement of facts, made voluntarily, and confirmed by the oath or affirmation of the party making it, taken before a person having authority to administer such oaths or affirmations [such as a notary public]."

6. May the school or district make textbooks, assessments, resource materials available to home school parents?

Yes, at the school's/district's discretion.

7. My home schooled daughter who is in 5th grade wants to attend the local school Valentines party. How should I make arrangements for her attendance?

Contact your daughter's boundary school principal, and explain your request. Schools should be accommodating. You can find the boundary school by calling the resident school district. Most school districts have websites that provide school names and contact information-

8. My son wants to participate in the third grade reading program. How can I arrange this?

If an (elementary) home schooled student wants to participate in "an academic activity" for a portion of the school day or on a regular basis, the parent should contact the school and arrange for the student's attendance. For the child's safety and for the school's accountability, the school may request parent's contact information and additional emergency contact information prior to the child's participation. If the academic program or activity includes field trips, parent(s) may be asked to accompany the student, at the school's discretion.

9. If my home schooled child wants to be dually enrolled (enrollment in public school for part of the school day or for a specific school class or activity), what is the procedure?

The school will require that the parent has filed the affidavit described under question #1, above. The school should explain that the class is generally scheduled from 10-11 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday and that the child is welcome to attend, but that the schedule may change from time to time without advance notice to parents. It is unlikely that a child can participate in the class every day at exactly the same time. It is the responsibility of the parent to be aware of the school's schedule. Both parents and teachers should be flexible and cooperative.

10. If my high-school age home schooled student wants to participate in extra-curricular or co-curricular activities. What rules may apply?

Students may participate in any co-curricular or extra-curricular activity in the public school, subject to compliance with the same rules and requirements that apply to a full-time student's participation in the activity, consistent with Utah Code Section 53A-11-102.5 and 102.6 and Board Rule R277-438. The student will not be required to enroll in additional public school courses, other than the classes required for participation in the activity. (e.g. participation in a chorus class may require child to be enrolled in 6th period Concert Choir; varsity wrestling may require a 1 period weight training class).

- 11. I home school my 9th grade daughter. She takes two courses through Washington K-12, an online school program, and I would like her to take a music and debate class at the local high school. How can I arrange this?

The student can be enrolled in both public schools as long as the state funding amount, or weighted pupil units (WPU), is not exceeded. The state pupil accounting system allows each school to claim its part of the WPU but does not allow one student to be funded for more than 7/7 of a WPU. Washington K-12 can claim the student for 2/7 of the state funding amount, and the local high school can claim 2/7 of the WPU, totaling 4/7.
